Reducing Risk In Accessibility Compliance

Accessibility requirements are some of the most confusing out there, especially in multi-family housing, healthcare and higher education buildings. With changing codes, interpretations, and trends, accessibility is not a static standard. In this presentation, Joshua Klyber, an APA professional with a decade of experience solving compliance issues will cover basic accessibility regulation standards and frameworks for minimizing risk.

Joshua Klyber

Joshua Klyber has been a leader in accessibility and Universal Design for the past 12 years, working on all market types including military, education, manufacturing, residential, hospitality and healthcare. As part of international team, he is an expert in a wide variety of standards, current best practices and code approaches being instituted around the world. Joshua is a registered ICC Accessibility plans examiner/inspector.
